

A Community/Webinar Screening:

Crown Jewels

A film by Alex Hauras about remaining U.S. old growth & mature forests and what we need to do to protect them.

Crown Jewels trailer

Film/ZOOM Webinar Screening hosted by FRIENDS of WHITE'S WOODS, THURSDAY, AUG., 22, 7:00 P.M.

TO REGISTER: SEND AN EMAIL TO
info@friendsofwhiteswood.org

Renowned environmental activist Alex Haraus and cinematographers Aidan Kranz and Elena Jean spent the last year exploring some of the last remaining ancient forests on public lands in the US. These forests - mature and old-growth forests - offer one of our best natural defenses against the impacts of climate change. But these carbon-storing powerhouses are so much more than that.

As the film crew travels from the rolling hills of West Virginia to the serene valleys of Wisconsin and temperate rainforest of Oregon, they learn more about the value that these ancient ecosystems have for the communities that depend on them.